By GEORGE BARR M'CUTCHEON

HIS dashing novel by an Indiana author has already achieved a remarkable success. It is the fifth best selling book in this country; it is the best selling book in the Dominion of Canada; and a large edition has been sold in England.

The dramatic rights for the United States have been sold to Miss Mary Mannering, who will produce it during the coming season. The dramatic rights for Great Britain have been sold to Mr. Fred Terry and Miss Julia Neilson, who will also produce it during the coming season.

No novel since "Trilby" has been dramatized for both countries and published in all three . . .
